Paolo Rossi, 26, just got his master degree from the University of Trento, he now wishes to know more about companies in his area, more specifically, he wants to browse nearby IT companies that deal with big data, he would like to know what is the average salary of those companies, and how many people work there.

Mario Salti is a 30 years old programmer that wishes to work for a couple of years in his hometown, and then transfer abroad after he has accumulated some money; he would like to join a company that has a location both in his hometown and abroad, so that he could simply ask to be moved from one office to the other; he would like to know if such companies exist in his hometown, and in what countries those companies have locations.

Marco Caldi, 18, is preparing a report for its economics class; more precisely he is focusing on the Silicon Valley tech boom; he needs to find, for each company with headquarters in the Silicon Valley, its founders, the foundation date, the current board members, its category (search engine, social networks, etc.) and its stock symbol, if it has one.

Fabrizio Giorgini is an investor and he is receiving hundreds of investment proposals every year from different types of companies: both start-ups and already well-established ones. He wants to minimize the risk of his financing and at the same time to maximize the number of investments. Therefore some knowledge about revenue, incomes, cash flow and other investors of the company will serve him for its evaluation.

Salvo Montalbano is a fourty years old financial policeman, and wishes to know more about the business life of a certain indivual, Mr. X; more particularly, he wants to know all the companies that have employed him.

Mario Martini is currently thinking about opening a company, and he does not like having too many people around; he would like to know, for each category (hardware, entertainment), whats the category that has the highest profit to employees ratio.

Bobby Ryan, 43, runs a pharmaceutical company. He wants the next cycle of investments to be focused on acquiring know-how and patents, to do that, a possible solution would be buying whole companies that either have many patents, many PHDs with the needed knownledge, or both. He needs to find companies with an high number of pharmaceutical patents or people with specialized in what he is looking for.

Billy J. Wood is a 45 years old hedge fund manager, he is looking to make some money by investing in companies that are about to be acquired by big names, such as Google, Nvidia, etc. To do that, he wants to browse the acquisitions made by those companies in the last year, and what category would define those companies (hardware, food processing, robotics, etc..)

Denise Myers is a business analyst, her goal is to give suggestions on solving problems in companies or industries. She needs to be continuously updated to the situation of her customers' companies, their competitors and collaborators. In some cases she might decide to talk to people from other businesses to understand better the problem and to get possible insights to their solutions, a knowledge of available contacts, related companies and liabilities may be very important to her activity.

Cassa Rurale di Trento is offering insurances to local companies, given a company it needs to decide which parts to cover, based on the company probability to go out of business, the cash or properties at its disposal, etc. To do that, an employee of Cassa Rurale, Federico Verdi needs a search engine which will return financial informations and local competitors of a given company.

Bern Goldstein is an american journalist, he wants to make a hit piece on the last social issues by involving the CEO of some company; to do that, given a list of companies, he wants to find the salary of the CEO and its social networks handles (twitter, facebook, etc.), either to pose him some questions or to find any exploitable wording of said CEO.

Billy J. Wood is an hedge fund manager that is now looking to assume someone to help him in financial analysis and automate some work, he's looking for people that got their university degree in Computer Science, Math, Physics or Finance in the past 5 years, the candidate should have problem solving skills; for all returned candidates he wants to know past working positions.

Ciaron Riggs works at a small game development studio in California and needs some counseling about filing patents for video games, not only from the legal point of view, but also from the practical, i.e. what is the latest trend among big video game businesses in terms of patents. He thinks that a person that works in the patent office and that has taken part in the examining process of video game patents might be the right person.

Like Wang is part of an investment branch of a chinese company and she has been tasked with acquiring data, she decided she is going to spend her budget not on employing IT people but by directly buying data from western companies; more specifically, given her company area of business, she needs data about either medical equipment or pharmaceutical purchases.

Lorenzo Os is writing an essay about innovation, startups and acquisitions in the IT sector; he wants the essay to be about the future landscape of IT business, with only startups and big corporations that are simply waiting for successful startups to buy out. To write a compelling report he needs to find a list of products from big names such as Google or Amazon that were not developed in house, but were actually just the result of an acquisition.

Thomas Brewest, a columnist of the Financial Times, is writing an article about the changing business model and revenue sources of companies in the X sector, moreover, he wants to see if those business models are similar to the ones of companies that have "subscription" and "trial" in their description.

Florrie Hess is an headhunter, she is looking to fill some positions in a R&D lab in India, to do that, she needs a list of people that are either in India and have experience in the X sector or that are inventor of patents that are about natural resins.

companies -> università che han fornito qualifica a persone in quelle companies trovare companies che danno quella qualifica